

ELIGIBLE AND INELIGIBLE CENSUS TRACTS

List of Census Tracts In Metropolitan Areas Which Are eligible and Ineligible as "Rural" Pursuant to Health and Safety Code Section 50199.21

This list contains information on census tracts in metropolitan counties which are eligible as "rural" as defined in Health and Safety Code Section 50199.21. There is a separate list of nonmetropolitan counties. (All portions of nonmetropolitan counties are eligible as rural.)

The listed ineligible census tracts are ineligible or partially ineligible for one of two reasons: they are either in whole or in part

1. Tracts in urbanized areas, as designated by the U.S. Census Bureau, or
2. Other tracts in cities of more than 40,000 population and adjoining unincorporated areas.

Tracts on the edges of the above areas often extend into rural areas, and any portions of such tracts which are Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) eligible as rural are eligible as rural under Section 50199.21. Tracts which are partially rural based on FmHA boundary lines are marked with asterisks, as follows:

* A portion of the tract is or may be FmHA eligible. (In some cases, all of the tract may be eligible.)

Sites in tracts marked with asterisks are to be considered rural only if FmHA considers the sites to be rural.

"Eligible tracts" which are not marked with asterisks are eligible without regard to FmHA eligibility. Because FmHA's population cut-off is lower than in Section 50199.21, many of these tracts are FmHA ineligible.

In the following list, only a positive or negative list is given for each county; that is, either all eligible tracts are listed, or all ineligible tracts are listed. In some counties, only the ineligible (including partially ineligible) tracts are listed. In other counties, such as Los Angeles and San Mateo, which have a large number of tracts but, by comparison, relatively few eligible tracts, only the eligible or partially eligible tracts are listed. All other tracts are ineligible.

In all cases, the census tract numbers in the lists are the census tract numbers at the time of the 1990 U.S. Census.
